

Readers' Resources

We've designed the 2022 program to explore themes around race, equity, anti-racism, and allyship, all through the lens of real estate.

We'll be visiting specific topics with each chosen book, but these overall themes will form the unifying background to our work. We are providing these resources to contextualize the work and provide a shared language across the program. We believe these provide a starting point. We encourage you to explore, share, and act on the other resources you will discover on your own antiracist journey.

National Museum of African American History and Culture

Talking About Race, an expansive exploration of the historical foundations of race as a concept.

Pod Save The People

Weekly podcast featuring overlooked stories that impact people of color.

The difference between being “not racist” and antiracist

TED Talk by Dr. Ibram X Kendi.

Medium: Things White People Can Do for Racial Justice

A regularly updated list of activities, readings, and additional resources to move to action

HAND RESC

The Housing Association for Nonprofit Developers \(HAND\) has created a remarkable collection of resources in their Racial Equity Resource Center. From reading to watching and listening, assessments and primary research, there is a lot to explore here.